WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Into the afternoon while the House, in violation of the Washington proprietary, was a piece of order, and accordingly was disposed, as Speaker Randall crossed the east door of the hall to compliment with a gentleman on another. The well-known guests of Grant was instantly recognized by members and spectators in the galleries, and a host of voices rose through here. The ex-President halted in a wife, seized Grant's and was immediately surrounded by Representatives eager to greet him. He was not on the Democratic side, and the Republicans had a long journey to perform to reach his presence. The scene that ensued was about six and becoming most demonstrative. The more highly heated Grant's, not more than a dozen members lingering to see the fun ensue.

Finally, when the confusion had become so great as to drown the voice of Mr. Springer, who was trying to make a speech on the point of order, Mr. Randall came forward to the east and across the committee rail. The door was instantly opened and the House being a recess for fifteen minutes. The General had hardly been seen, however, when Mr. Randall immediately moved that the House take a recess for fifteen minutes. The motion was carried with many cheers, and the General was then led with many cheers, and the General was then led with many cheers, and the General was then led

THE VATICAN.

[NO CAUSE FOR ANY EXCITEMENT OR RUMORS.]

ROME, April 7.—[Special Cable Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.]—The speculations of the Paris correspondent of the London Times regarding the Pope's departure are baseless. At the Vatican it is positively denied that the Pope has spoken to the Emperor of Austria on the subject. His Holiness has no intention of going to Monaco or anywhere else at present, though it is a passage of his speech at the last consistory to make a striking allusion, which qualified to the official version, to the possibility of his eventually leaving. During the recent visit of the Pope's deputies, Signor Rampolla said: "I shall believe it when I see the Holy Father on board ship." The utmost power of a Roman cardinal might compel Pope Leo to quit the hospitality of a foreign Power.

AT THE MERCY OF BRIGANDS.

A Roman Archbishop of great influence said to me today: "I see nothing to keep us here. On whom else would the church would be safer and more respected than in Rome. We may yet ask hospitality of the United States. I see signs of great scarcity approach to a world should the year close in July. Even we are at the mercy of our enemies. We have nothing to hope of the Government. We hold the Vatican itself only on sufferance, for the law of guarantees merely gives the Pope the right to occupy the building. At any moment he might be ejected."

"What are the Holy Father's own views on the subject?"

"The Holy Father keeps them to himself," was the reply.

"But when Cardinal Jacobini formed the idea of leaving?"

"Questions to all reports in the Vatican as long as it humanly possible. That answer as [illegible] have to leave I trouble chiefly. Rumors, we have learned to consider so," said the archbishop thoughtfully, tapping his snuff-box.

"Do you not think the Papacy would lose prestige if it left Rome?"

"I do not," replied the Archbishop.

THE SUCCESSION.

Concerning the question further he said: "Even if the Pope leaves, the fact will be kept secret until it is accomplished. Though no foreign Government has made any official protest, Mr. James Mooney, among the last impressive words uttered by the archbishop of the Propaganda, is supposed to make suggestions. Recent negotiations are sure to progress between Signor Bianchi and a person enjoying the confidence of the Propaganda. It is hoped that an understanding will be arrived at. The Government has decided not to touch the American College, which is thus acknowledged to be an annex of the papal institution. The Government also seems willing to grant to the Propaganda certain privileges, among others the exemption for all Catholic ecclesiastics.

The letter was written in Italian, and was translated by Lieutenant Shea. It stated that Tony Ruffo had been arrested in Italy for the murder of his brother, and had been released. The Chicago Cheese Works, on Fifth avenue, between Hand and the Rock Branch, are using 1,000,000 gallons of water a day, pumping that supply from the Randolph tunnel, with which the works are connected by a large pipe. The company pays for the water used, and for the privilege of the connection with the tunnel. Engineer Ayers, of the city, has been directed to investigate the matter, and report to the Board of Public Works.
